FACE IT !

Most of us try to avoid our problems. However, our spiritual growth depends on confronting them and working through the suffering they cause. In “The Road Less Traveled”, psychotherapist M. Scott Peck teaches you how to face the inevitable challenges in your life, grow through hardship, and ultimately attain deeper self-knowledge. His recommended path to spiritual enlightenment includes four key elements: discipline, love, personal faith and grace. Without these four qualities, you risk not only spiritual stagnation but also the mental health problems that come with it. Embracing these four qualities leads to better health, better relationships, and a richer life.

Acceptance of Responsibility:

People with poor discipline usually struggle with embracing responsibility. But If you try to make your problems the responsibility of others, they won't get solved, and you will be the one who suffers.

Life is a series of choices, and the best way to develop a healthy sense of responsibility is to engage in self-examination while you make those choices. Observe yourself, and notice whether or not what you expect of yourself is realistic, and make adjustments where necessary. Alternatively, notice when you may be blaming others for a problem that is your responsibility, and take responsibility for solving it. Seeing and engaging with the world through an honest lens is often painful, but when you have the discipline to do so, you are able to make choices that best support growth.

God Bless.

Programs & Workshops

RCIA Formation Webinar : Contact: Formation at 416-934-3400, ext. 523 or formation@archtoronto.org

Music Minister Formation Webinar:

This event is for all Music Ministers. When planning music for weddings and funerals we often give most of our attention in planning to the hymns. While they have an important role to play in the liturgy, they are not the only opportunities for music in these liturgies.

Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion Formation Webinar : This event is for those who are Extraordinary Ministers of Holy Communion. The Eucharistic liturgy is a place of encountering the living God. It is a place where we are called to encounter the mystery of God and then return to the world, filled with wonder and awe to transform it. Please download the poster for more information.
